About Pattaya

Pattaya is an old city situated on the eastern region of Thailand facing the Gulf of Thailand at latitude 13°N and longitude 101°E on the eastern coastline of the country.

It is about 150 kilometers from Bangkok and about 160 kilometers from Don Muang Airport. Its beach is approximately 15 kilometers long. Territory : North: Starts from the line of Krathinglai canal East: Lies parallel to Sukhumvit Road. South: Reaches the areas of Huai Yai subdistrict. West: Lies parallel to the coastline. Total area: 208.10 square kilometers. Land area:(Koh Lan) 53.44 square kilometers. Water area: 154.66 square kilometers. Pattaya city is located in Chonburi Province which is called "Muang Chon" for a short name. This eastern seaside province has been famous for tourism for a long time. It is an agricultural resource for cultivating economic crops, such as, sugarcane, cassava and para rubber as well as a site for Laem Chabang deep sea port and an important industrial estate. Historically, it appears by available evidence that Muang Chon was present in the Ayutthaya period. Originally, it was a small city consisting of many small towns namely Bangsai, Bangplasoi and Bangphra. Later on, in the reign of King Rama V, these towns were combined to be Chonburi Province. Pattaya is divided into 4 sections namely North Pattaya, Central Pattaya, South Pattaya and Jomtien Beach for convenient administration and organization in looking after tourists and residents for safety. In addition to the areas on the shore, Koh Larn, Koh Khrok and Koh Sak which are about 8 kilometers from the shore also include in the administrative district of Pattaya City.

1. North Pattaya (Naklua) At Naklua, there are still old wooden houses, narrow roads, traditional noodle shops and fishing boats existing. The old houses constructed over the creek are especially picturesque. North Pattaya has five-star hotels, shady trees and a calm atmosphere. When walking along a road, we can find plenty of shops selling local handicrafts but when approaching the Dolphin Roundabout which is a sign of the beginning of parallel Beach Road marking the boundary of North Pattaya, its surroundings look completely different from salt fields. A lot of hotels, bungalows and restaurants were constructed adjacent to Beach Road. Here, you can go for a walk under shady palm trees along a sidewalk which has just been constructed to the well-known two streets of Pattaya where hotels, shopping centers, clubs, bars and a tourist police office are situated

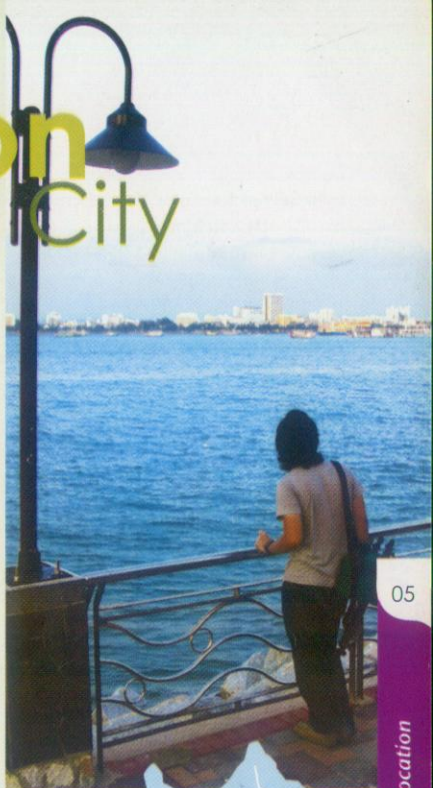

2. Central Pattaya The hotels here are not so grand whereas restaurants are smaller than other zones. Here you will find the beginning of Pattaya's bar-beers, or open-air bars. In addition, there are plenty of tailor shops, and many a-go-go bars. Pattaya ...

Location Pattaya City

Pattaya City is located on the eastern shores of the Gulf of Thailand with a stretch of beach of about 15 kilometers in length, covering a total area of approximately 208.10 square kilometers, accounting for 25% of land areas (including Koh Lan) and 75% of sea areas. Most of the areas feature hills with a few of plains. In general, its climates are influenced by monsoons in 3 seasons namely rainy, cool and hot seasons. Apart from the influence of monsoons, Pattaya is also affected by tropical storms from the Bay of Bengal.

As these storms occur temporarily, they cause heavy rainfalls in the areas where they are blowing by. Rainy Season: It extends from Mid-May to Mid-October and is the period of SW monsoon, a moisture-laden wind, blowing to Pattaya, resulting in rainfalls. Cool season: It extends from October to February. It is the period of NE monsoon, blowing cool and dry mass of air to Pattaya City, decreasing temperature during December and January. Hot season: It is a period when there is a change of monsoons and extends from February to mid-May. It is a sultry period, especially in April when the temperature rises high.

Naklua means "salt fields" after the main occupation of the area before the rise of tourism and industry.

North Pattaya /Naklua

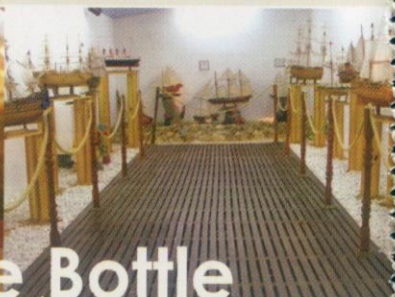

There is still the air of an ancient village to Naklua today, for here you will see old wooden houses and narrow streets, traditional noodle shops and working fishing boats. The old houses over the creek are especially picturesque, and a walk through the streets will reveal plenty of little shops selling handicrafts and domestic goods. Central Pattaya Pattaya Klang, or Central Pattaya is a little funkier than the Northern district.

Central Pattaya

The hotels are not so grand, the restaurants smaller, and here you will find the beginning of Pattaya's bar-beers, or open-air bars. There are plenty of tailor shops, and some A go-go bars. Pattaya police station, and the Immigration Office are here. Two main shopping malls, the Royal Garden Plaza and Mike's Place, are both in Central Pattaya. In addition to the action along Beach Road, many of the sois are very lively: Soi Post Office, and Soi Pattayaland 1, 2 and 3 in particular.

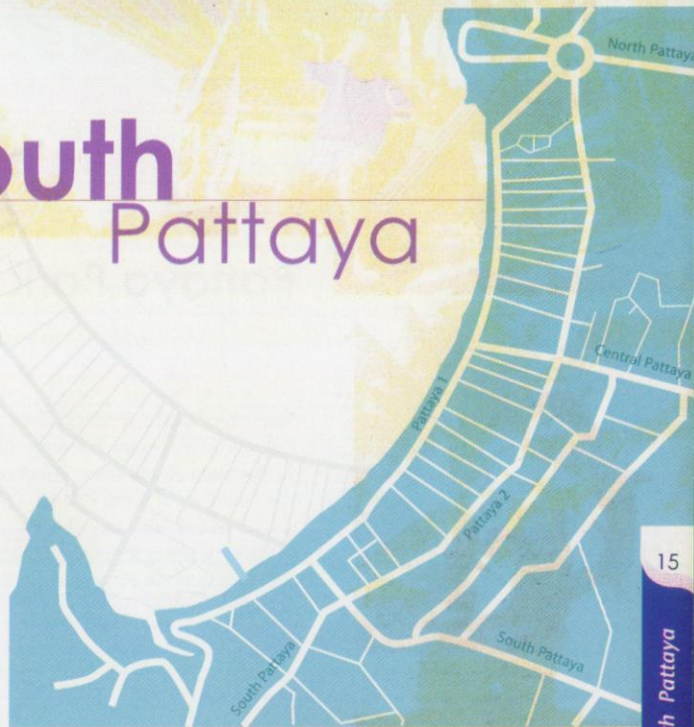

Central Pattaya

There is a Tourist Police office on Beach Road near the junction with South Pattaya's Walking Street. The sois will all take you through to Second Road, where there are more bars and restaurants, and a couple of dive shops. There are many small hotels and guesthouses here, offering good value accommodation and no-frills Western and Thai dining.

South Pattaya

South Pattaya

South Pattaya Road curves sharply off from Beach Road, taking the traffic away from this busy district which is now known as Walking Street.

South Pattaya

A relatively recent development, this pedestrians only zone is welcome relief, allowing visitors to browse amongst the endless little shops offering fast tailoring services, sports goods, jewelry and souvenirs. Here too the bars are almost endless, as are the big seafood restaurants, several of them built out over the ocean and offering pleasant surroundings to enjoy your meal. South Pattaya tends to be older, brasher and busier than the remainder of the city.

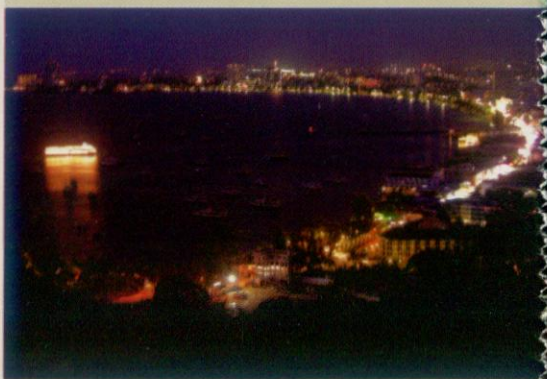

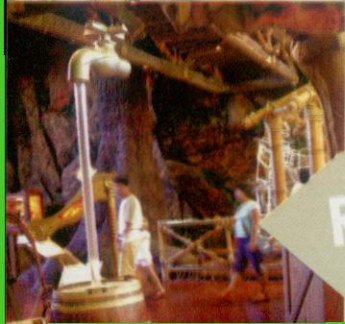

Pattaya Park

Funny Land and Water Park

You can walk uninterrupted all the way through to the Siam Bayshore Hotel and Arthachinda Road, which effectively marks the boundary of South Pattaya. Take any of the soi no matter how tiny they may seem, to make your way through to Pratamnak Road, the back part of Pattaya which links up with Second Road.

sweeping inland from the Thai Gulf, and because the seas are less congested with boats than in Pattaya Bay. This is also the place to relax for a suntan, or go for long early morning or sunset walks along the oceanfront. There is little in the way of shopping or beer-bars at Jomtien, which is essentially a residential area with beachside hotels, bungalow complexes, condominiums and restaurants. Jomtien has its own very distinctive gay beach, accessed by turning right at the bottom of the hill; for all other attractions, turn left.

Around Jomtien Beach As is so often the case in Thailand, you will see several different spellings of "Jomtien". This district, with its 6 km beach, is divided off from the rest of Pattaya by the hill which rises to the back of South Pattaya. Drive over the hill, past the big Buddha and the Royal Cliff Hotel, and down into the relatively quiet Jomtien. The beach is popular with windsurfs and water sports enthusiasts, largely because the area enjoys brisk and fresh breezes

Koh Larn

In the past, it was called "coral island" which is a well-known name to foreigners. As this island is abundant in a variety of corals, both Thai and foreign tourists prefer to go for a change of air here.

Covering an area of approximately 3,500 rai, Koh Larn features a shape like an unequilateral pentagon with several beautiful beaches. Its widest section is 2.15 kilometers and its length from north to south is approximately 4.65 kilometers. Koh Larn offers several beautiful marine destinations vivified by a large number of tourists. It is located parallel to Pattaya Beach.

This miniature city offers replicas of sacred place and important historical sites such as the Temple of the Emerald Buddha, Democratic Monument, the Bridge over the River Khwae, Rama IX Bridge, the Golden Stupa and Phimai Khemer Sanctuary, the Golden Mountain, Anantasamakhom Throne Hall, etc. These creations reflect the esthetic value, the feeling and attitude of a Dutch craftsman master, Mr. Peter Bedelais has towards Thai culture in a fine and in-depth manner. He shows his great talent in the form of exquisitely crafted creations in glass bottles to reflect the value of ancient architecture and simplicity of culture in some countries. In addition, there is a collection of water vehicles, i.e. "boats" in several styles both in simple and exquisite patterns. He also created several miniature creations such as Buddha images, windmills, Chinese pavilions and fantastically assembled in a bottle. This gentleman did this creation 14 hours a day for a continuous period of 5 years to achieve the creation of this work.

Food and Restaurant

Thai food is internationally famous. Whether chilli-hot or comparatively bland, harmony is the guiding principle behind each dish. Thai cuisine is essentially a marriage of centuries-old Eastern and Western influences harmoniously combined into something uniquely Thai. The characteristics of Thai food depend on who cooks it, for whom it is cooked, for what occasion, and where it is cooked to suit all palates. Originally, Thai cooking reflected the characteristics of a waterborne lifestyle. Aquatic animals, plants and herbs were major ingredients. Large chunks of meat were eschewed. Subsequent influences introduced the use of sizeable chunks to Thai cooking.

With their Buddhist background, Thais shunned the use of large animals in big chunks. Big cuts of meat were shredded and laced with herbs and spices. Traditional Thai cooking methods were stewing and baking, or grilling. Chinese influences saw the introduction of frying, stir frying and deep-frying. Culinary influences from the 17th century onwards included Portuguese, Dutch, French and Japanese. Chillies were introduced to Thai cooking during the late 1600s by Portuguese missionaries who had acquired a taste for them while serving in South America.

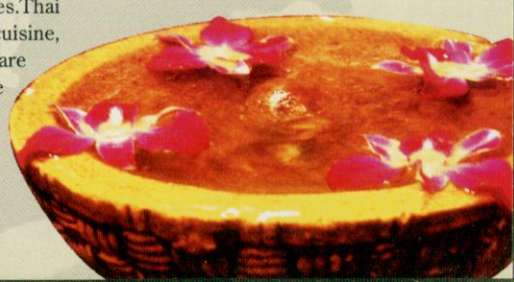

Thais were very adept at 'Siamese-ising' foreign cooking methods, and substituting ingredients. The ghee used in Indian cooking was replaced by coconut oil, and coconut milk substituted for other daily products. Overpowering pure spices were toned down and enhanced by fresh herbs such as lemon grass and galanga. Eventually, fever and less spiced were used in Thai curries, while the use of fresh herbs increased. It is generally acknowledged that Thai curries burn intensely, but briefly, whereas other curries, with strong spices, burn for longer periods. Instead of serving dishes in courses, a Thai meal is served all at once, permitting dinners to enjoy complementary combinations of different tastes. Thai Herbs and Spices In Western cuisine, herbs you use to flavour dishes are normally removed before serving. In Thai cuisine, however, the food is served with all the herbs and spices left in.

Some you will recognize as being edible but you could well be confused by some other unknowns. To overcome this problem, Keep your eyes on any Thai companions at the table, but best avoided in any case are things such as bay leaves, cardamom leaves and seeds, chillies, cinnamon sticks, coriander leaves and root, shredded or sliced ginger, galangal, pickles lemon, kaffir lime leaves, lemon grass, ginger and basil.

Thai Vegetables

Thai cooking uses a large amount of fresh vegetables. This is a healthy and delicious addition to any meal. The main vegetables used in cooking include green asparagus, green beans, broccoli, baby carrots, baby corn, cauliflower, spinach, button and black mushrooms, cabbage, pampkin, spring onions, tomatoes and water chesnuts.

Thai Fruits

Thailand has an amazing variety of succulent fruits with delicious flavours.

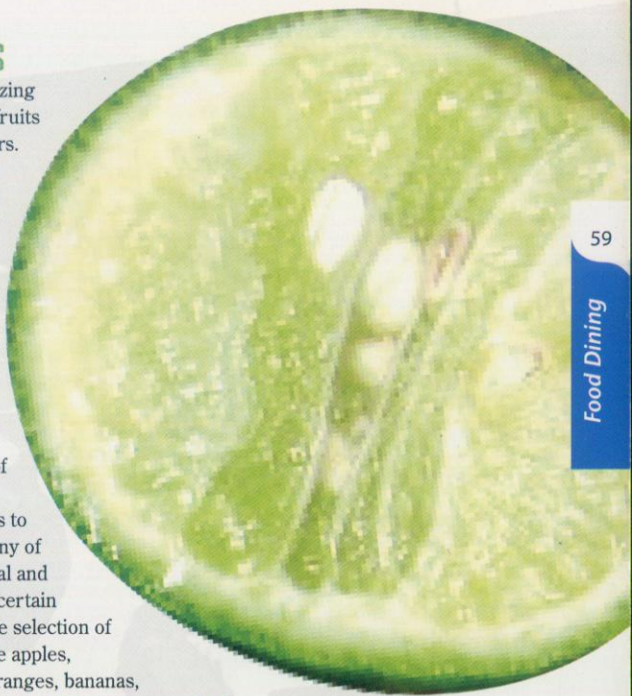

Exotic tropical fruits abound here and are very inexpensive to buy. As with most fresh produce, it is less expensive to shop in the indoor supermarkets.

Fruit is usually the dessert of choice at the end of a meal.

The vast selections of fruits also make delicious fruit shakes to combat the heat. Many of the fruits are seasonal and are available only at certain times of the year. The selection of fruit available include apples, cantaloupe, guava, oranges, bananas, papaya. Watermelon, pineapple, coconut, pampelo, grapes, green and ripe mango, durian, mangosteen and rambutan, langsat, sapodilla, jackfruit, rose apple, custard apple and longan, plum mango and tamarind, star apple and lychee. Thailand is also famous for its exquisite fruit carving. You can see examples of this at many restaurants and if you are interested in learning, several hotels offer classes in fruit carving.

Buffalo Racing Festival

Buffalo Race

This buffalo racing festival which is one of the oldest traditional festivals of Chonburi Province is held annually in October.

Buffalo Racing Festival

It started from the gathering of people from various localities riding their buffalo-pulled carts carrying goods to stop over at Ban Tha Kwian in the city of Chonburi.

To pass the time during waiting, they took their buffalos to race for fun. This activity finally turned to be a tradition held in October of every year.

Apart from the people of Muang District who observe this tradition, people of Ban Bueng District and of Non Yai District also hold this festival in proximate time.

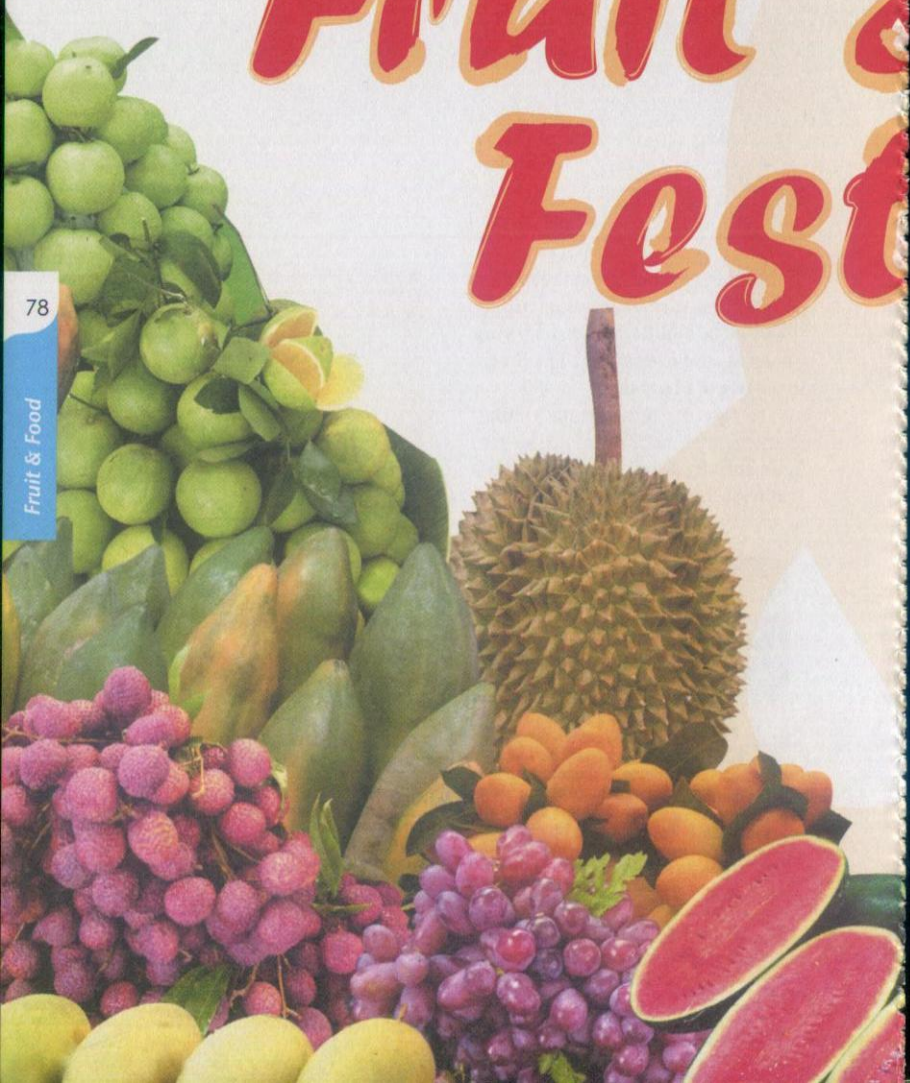

On a racing day, farmers will decorate their buffalos with different colored robes for a competition and take them to the frontage of the District Office.

Activities taking place after this gathering is a buffalo race, contests of buffalo health, and best decoration as well as a beauty contest wherein young women compete for the title of "Nong Nang Ban Na (peasant girl) Beauty Pageant", etc.

Entertainment

Entertainment Overview

Pattaya is well known for its wild nightlife. The A-Go-Go Bars and Beer bars line Pattaya Beach Road and the Walking Street, attracting tourists from all over the world. However, there are other things to do in Pattaya in the evenings. There are cinemas and cabarets, endless restaurants and many good bands.

Shows/Cabarets

There are a few transvestite stage shows in town. They are not offensive and are great fun when you have visitors. The shows are one of the most popular tourists attractions in Pattaya and are usually very crowded with tourists. You may contact the shows directly or book tickets through a travel agent. It is a good idea to buy tickets ahead of time as many shows sell out, especially on the weekends.
